is a collection of dark, speculative flash-fiction. Darker than the American original Donald Barthelme, more speculative than the Argentinian wordsmith Jorge Luis Borges, and much less philosophical than the great "mortal" master Jacques Sternberg. But there's madness between these covers, humanity in all its hope and horror. Just open the book and see.

F. J. Gouldner has been writing for as long as he can remember. He spent several years overseas and he has made an art of keeping his head above water. Life happens but the writing comes anyway.
